1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 In its Motion, Arriva submitted extensive evidence demonstrating that it has 3 substantially consummated its Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Plan, causing a comprehensive 4 change of circumstances that renders AlphaMed's appeal equitably and constitutionally 5 moot. Remarkably, AlphaMed brought this result upon itself. Despite clear statutory and 6 decisional authority requiring it to do so, AlphaMed failed to seek a stay of the Plan 7 Confirmation Order. Accordingly, Arriva brought its Plan effective, and has operated for 8 the last three months as a completely reorganized company.

9 In its Opposition, AlphaMed says very little about the mootness Motion. The first 10 ten pages present a tired rehash of factual assertions that numerous courts have repeatedly 11 rejected as untrue. Those assertions may relate to their attempt to reverse the Bankruptcy 12 Court on the five appeals before this Court, but they do not impact the issue of mootness 13 presently before this Court. The last four pages of the Opposition prematurely argue the 14 merits of AlphaMed's appeal—again, merits that lie outside the scope of the instant 15 mootness Motion.

16 Yet more than what it says, the Opposition is most defective for what it does not say.
17 The Opposition does not explain why—despite clear decisional and statutory authority—18 AlphaMed neglected its duty to seek a stay of the Plan Confirmation Order. Nor does the 19 Opposition bother to rebut the presumption of mootness set forth in In re Chateaugay Corp., 20 10 F.3d 944, 952 (2d Cir. 1993) (Chateaugay II). Finally, although AlphaMed conclusorily 21 asserts that this Court can order effective relief, it fails to explain how this Court can do so 22 without merely creating an "unmanageable, uncontrollable situation for the Bankruptcy 23 Court." In re Roberts Farms, 652 F.2d 793, 795 (9th Cir. 1981).

24 Of course, AlphaMed's reticence is really no mystery: AlphaMed has no excuse for 25 failing to seek a stay of the Plan Confirmation Order; AlphaMed cannot rebut the 26 presumption of mootness; and, AlphaMed cannot explain how the Bankruptcy Court could 27 render practicable and effective relief. Accordingly, this Court should dismiss AlphaMed's 28 appeal of the Plan Confirmation Order as equitably and constitutionally moot.

II. REPLY

In this Reply, Arriva will first demonstrate AlphaMed failed to rebut the presumption that this appeal should be dismissed as moot. Arriva will then demonstrate that the only two issues which AlphaMed raises as a basis for its appeal of its Plan Confirmation Order are just as frivolous as all the other points they have raised.

A. AlphaMed's Appeal Is Moot

In its Opposition, AlphaMed neglects to excuse its failure to obtain a stay of the Plan Confirmation Order, fails to rebut the presumption of mootness, and fails to show how this Court could grant effective relief. Indeed, AlphaMed's own cases expose their appeal as moot. Accordingly, this Court should dismiss AlphaMed's appeal as moot.

1. AlphaMed Fails to Excuse Its Failure to Obtain a Stay

AlphaMed failed to seek a stay of the Plan Confirmation Order. This neglect constitutes "procedural ineptitude," In re Roberts Farms, 652 F.2d at 795, for which AlphaMed has absolutely no excuse. Indeed, AlphaMed's ineptitude is particularly egregious here, where it had a month to move for the stay. On January 16, 2008, Judge Jellen announced his decision to confirm Arriva's Plan of Reorganization. Then, not until February 13, 2008 did Arriva bring its Plan effective, emerging from bankruptcy as a reorganized company.

In its frail attempt to explain away its ineptitude, AlphaMed commits errors of both fact and law. For example, AlphaMed argues that In re Roberts Farms, 652 F.2d at 793 does not require AlphaMed to seek a stay. This is incorrect. In re Roberts Farms, 652 F.2d at 798, holds:

We think that the thrust of [Valley National Bank of Arizona v. Trustee, 609 F.2d 1274 (9th Cir. 1974)] is that it is obligatory upon appellant in a situation like the one with which we are faced to pursue with diligence all available remedies to obtain a stay of execution of the objectionable order (even to the extent of applying to the Circuit Justice for relief . . .).

AlphaMed cannot escape the imperative of In re Roberts Farms. As noted in the Motion, In re Roberts Farms represents the seminal case on bankruptcy mootness in the Ninth Circuit,

1 and forms the basis for mootness doctrines in practically all sister circuits. In the context of 2 multiparty bankruptcies such as Arriva's, an appellant must seek a stay, or face the 3 consequences. And here, AlphaMed's "procedural ineptitude," id. at 795, "well may be the 4 end of [its] appeal." Id. at 798; In re Baker & Drake, Inc., 35 F.2d 1348, 1352 (9th Cir.
 5 1994) ("Failure to obtain a stay, standing alone, is often fatal."); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 8005 (A 6 "motion for a stay of the judgment, order, or decree of a bankruptcy judge . . . must 7 ordinarily be presented to the bankruptcy judge in the first instance.").

8 Besides this, on page 13 of the Opposition, AlphaMed states the Roberts Farms court 9 "examined with approval" Matter of Combined Metals Reduction Co., 557 F.2d 179 (9th Cir.
 10 1981). According to AlphaMed, this case "declined to dismiss as moot an appeal from an 11 order confirming a plan of reorganization." In fact, while preserving for merits review an 12 issue on appeal from plan confirmation, the Combined Metals court dismissed as moot six 13 appeals in their entirety, and an additional two appeals partially. Taking heed of these facts, 14 Roberts Farms court cited Combined Metals for the proposition that "practical necessities . .
 15 . require" dismissal of the appeal of the order confirming the plan in that case where a 16 reorganization is not "stayed pending appeal." In re Roberts Farms, 652 F.2d at 797
 17 (emphasis added). Thus, Combined Metals—a case on which AlphaMed relies—demands 18 immediate dismissal of AlphaMed's appeal of the order confirming Arriva's plan as moot.

19 One who seeks equity must do equity. Here, AlphaMed has flouted its decisional and 20 statutory obligation to obtain a stay of the Plan Confirmation Order. Under In re Roberts 21 Farms, 652 F.2d at 798, an appellant must seek a stay from the Bankruptcy Court, the 22 District Court, the Ninth Circuit and the Circuit Justice. Why did AlphaMed not do so?
 23 AlphaMed simply does not say. Certainly AlphaMed cannot plead ignorance; counsel for 24 Arriva informed AlphaMed of the availability of a stay on the record at the Confirmation 25 hearing. (Exhibit C to the Declaration of Michael H. Ahrens [the "Ahrens Declaration"], 26 16:21-24 & 18:9-12) By no means is AlphaMed's ineptitude harmless: Since Arriva brought 27 its plan effective, numerous parties—including investors, creditors and scores of third 28 parties—have legitimately relied on the integrity of Arriva's reorganization. Now,

1 AlphaMed seeks to reverse all of that, boldly asking this Court to repair a debacle of 2 AlphaMed's own inept making. AlphaMed's failure to seek a stay alone requires this Court 3 to dismiss AlphaMed's appeal as moot.

4 2. *AlphaMed Does Not Even Attempt to Rebut the Presumption of Mootness

5 In its Motion, Arriva demonstrated it has substantially consummated its plan, causing 6 a comprehensive change in circumstances. This change, in turn, gives rise to a presumption 7 of mootness. In re Chateaugay Corp., 10 F.3d 944, 952 (2d Cir. 1993) (Chateaugay II); 8 In re Chateaugay Corp., 94 F.3d. 772, 776 (2d Cir. 1996) ("Chateaugay III") ("Reviewing 9 courts presume that it will be inequitable or impractical to grant relief after substantial 10 consummation of a plan or reorganization."). AlphaMed can only rebut the Chateaugay 11 presumption by making each one of five showings. (Motion, 12 n.5.) AlphaMed does not 12 even attempt to make these showings, and thus fails to rebut the presumption of mootness.
13 On this basis alone, this Court should dismiss AlphaMed's appeal as moot.

14 AlphaMed notes the Ninth Circuit has not adopted this presumption. In so stating, 15 however, AlphaMed ignores that when Chief Judge Jacobs formulated the Chateaugay 16 mootness presumption, he relied on Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent. (Motion, 17 12.) Moreover, the mootness presumption roots itself in Congressional enactment, 11 18 U.S.C. § 1101(2), rather than case law, making it a structurally sound rule in any event.

19 3. *AlphaMed Fails to Explain How This Court Can Fashion Effective Relief

20 In support of its mootness Motion, Arriva offered extensive testimony in declarations 21 of its activities since the Effective Date. This evidence showed Arriva has substantially 22 consummated its Plan, causing a comprehensive change of circumstances that renders 23 AlphaMed's appeal equitably and constitutionally moot. In its Opposition, AlphaMed 24 makes the conclusory assertion that this Court could fashion effective relief, yet utterly fails 25 to show, as a matter of fact, how this Court could do so. Indeed, AlphaMed did not file even 26 one declaration to support its conclusory assertion the Bankruptcy Court could render 27 effective relief.
28

1 AlphaMed offers the conclusory assertion that "[t]his is not a complex, billion-dollar 2 affair that has affected 'innumerable' third parties." (Opposition, 17.) In fact, this 3 bankruptcy is complex. Indeed, it is far more complex than the Sylmar, Weinstein and 4 Baker & Drake cases on which AlphaMed relies in the Opposition, and which Arriva 5 distinguishes, infra. Also, contrary to AlphaMed's suggestion, this case does involve 6 numerous parties, including more than forty third parties who have performed under 7 contracts since the Effective Date three months ago.¹ True, Arriva's bankruptcy case was 8 not a "billion-dollar affair." But no case in the Ninth Circuit or elsewhere holds that the 9 mootness doctrine only applies to Fortune 500 companies. It is, instead, a rule that protects 10 the debtor, creditors and other third parties in any bankruptcy where (as here) the appellant 11 cannot obtain effective relief.

12 Further stretching the facts, AlphaMed attempts to minimize MPM's and Nordic's 13 reliance on the integrity of Arriva's Plan, suggesting they are not third parties "unaware" that 14 AlphaMed objected to the Plan. (See Opposition, 16.) In so doing, AlphaMed ignores that 15 Nordic was not a shareholder of Arriva until after Arriva brought its Plan effective. Nordic 16 was a third party investor that had no relationship to Arriva when Arriva filed for 17 bankruptcy. Nordic invested in Arriva after its bankruptcy filing and relied on the 18 Bankruptcy Court's order in making its loan to Arriva. AlphaMed additionally disregards 19 that insiders are entitled to rely on a Bankruptcy Court's final unstayed order confirming a 20 plan of reorganization. In this respect, while MPM and Nordic may have known AlphaMed 21 objected to some aspects of the Plan, they also certainly knew AlphaMed did not obtain a 22 stay of the Plan Confirmation Order, and that Arriva was free—indeed, obligated—to move 23 forward with its reorganization.

24 The declarations filed with the mootness Motion make clear Arriva has undertaken a 25 number of activities since the Effective Date more than three months ago. Indeed, even in 26

27 ¹ Also contrary to AlphaMed's suggestions, Arriva does not "totally obscure[]" the amount 28 of its distributions to date. In fact, in Exhibit N to the Preston Declaration in Support of the Motion, Arriva details its distributions to the penny.

1 the three weeks since it filed its Motion, Arriva has undertaken still more activities that 2 render AlphaMed's appeal moot. Accordingly, Arriva now submits further declarations² in 3 support of this Reply to demonstrate that creditors, insiders, lenders, and innocent third 4 parties have relied on Arriva's emergence from Chapter 11. Without repeating all the 5 activities set forth on pages 7-9 of the Motion, and as set forth in the declarations in support 6 of the Motion and this Reply, Arriva submits that on and after February 13, 2008:

- 7 1. Arriva drew down on its $6 million line of credit provided by its lenders, 8 Nordic and MPM. This take-out financing was funded in reliance on the 9 Plan being confirmed and there being no stay of the Plan's effectiveness.
10 Arriva has no funds or line of credit to repay this take-out financing were this 11 Court to reverse the Plan Confirmation Order.
- 12 2. Arriva has paid approximately $5 million to more than 80 different parties, 13 as set forth in the Declaration of M. Sue Preston in Support of the Reply (the 14 "Preston Reply Declaration"), ¶ 4 & Exhibit B. These parties are spread all 15 over the world, and it would be difficult or impossible to retrieve the funds 16 paid to them. Nor is there any legal reason to retrieve those funds when 17 those parties have provided valid services and products in consideration for 18 such payments.
- 19 3. Arriva and QSV have performed under a contract whereby QSV
20 manufactures and provides clinical rAAT to Arriva. Arriva has paid QSV 21 $1,209,306.08 since February 13, 2008. QSV, located in Canada, has geared 22 up for performance under this contract, and will continue to perform in the 23 future. These funds are difficult or impossible to retrieve. Indeed, any 24 attempt to retrieve them would injure QSV, making a waste of its new hires 25 and costs incurred to perform under its contract with Arriva.

26 ² Courts routinely accept further evidence of mootness in the context of bankruptcy. For 27 example, in In re Roberts Farms, 652 F.2d at 796 & 799-803, the Ninth Circuit adopted by 28 reference debtor's counsel's 28(j) letter in an appendix, which letter updated the court on new events that had occurred up to time of the Ninth Circuit argument.

- 1 4. Arriva has been invited by a Board that oversees international patient 2 registries to present its clinical results and future plans. Members of this 3 Board have allocated valuable human resources to considering Arriva's 4 program as the way to solve treatment of hereditary emphysema. If Arriva 5 cannot continue its operations as it emerges from Chapter 11, this will have 6 an adverse impact on the many hereditary emphysema patients diagnosed 7 with a fatal disease for whom no therapy is currently available.
- 8 5. Arriva has assumed over forty contracts that it did not have to assume.
9 When a Bankruptcy Court confirms a plan of reorganization, the Debtor 10 either assumes or rejects (breaches) its pre-bankruptcy contracts. Since the 11 Plan became effective, Arriva assumed and agreed to perform under these 12 contracts. Third parties to these forty contracts have relied on this 13 performance since February 13th, and no party's performance under these 14 contracts can be undone. (Exhibit A to the Preston Reply Declaration.)
- 15 6. Arriva has cancelled all the stock of its old shareholders, owned by more 16 than 65 different individuals and entities, and issued new common and 17 preferred stock.
- 18 7. Arriva settled claims with twelve companies and individuals, relying on the 19 Effective Date, which claims totaled more than $31 million. In settling their 20 claims, these parties relied on the integrity of Arriva's reorganization.

21 With each passing day, Arriva's activities cause its reorganization to become more 22 deeply entrenched. Arriva now has no money to repay the loans, and no money to pay the 23 tens of millions of dollars in damages on its assumed contracts in the case that reversal of 24 the Plan Confirmation Order effected a breach of those contracts. Indeed, reversal would 25 implicate more than monetary harm. A board that oversees large international patient 26 registries has put its faith in Arriva, committing human resources to it in the hope that it can 27 facilitate a cure for hereditary emphysema. This Court cannot practicably tell this board, 28 and the many patients whom it serves, that Arriva's Plan is "unconfirmed," that Arriva must be liquidated, and that a cure for this disease is suddenly more distant than it was yesterday.

1 Any remand order instructing the Bankruptcy Court to unscramble the eggs of this 2 reorganization would not result in "relief" at all, but would merely create an "unmanageable, 3 uncontrollable situation for the Bankruptcy Court." In re Roberts Farms, Inc., 652 F.2d at 4 797.

5 4. *AlphaMed's Own Cases Demonstrate AlphaMed's Appeal Is Moot

6 The cases on which AlphaMed relies provide an excellent study in contrast. Each 7 one demonstrates why this Court must dismiss AlphaMed's appeal as moot.

8 For example, In re Sylmar Plaza, L.P., 314 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir. 2002) was a single- 9 asset, two-party bankruptcy involving a solvent debtor. In that case, Platinum appealed 10 confirmation of Sylmar's plan of reorganization, claiming Sylmar owed it "default" interest.
11 The Bankruptcy Appellate Panel affirmed the plan, and when Platinum appealed to the 12 Ninth Circuit, Sylmar moved to dismiss the appeal as moot. The Ninth Circuit denied the 13 motion. First, the court noted, Platinum's claim was "for monetary damages against solvent 14 debtors." Id. at 1074. Second, the court noted there had not been a comprehensive change 15 of circumstances. Id. Sylmar's plan was extremely simple, involving only two parties, a 16 dispute solely about the amount of interest, a full payout of creditors, and no subsequent 17 restructuring.

18 AlphaMed's misbegotten appeal is exactly the opposite of Platinum's. Arriva's 19 bankruptcy was not a two-party single-asset case with a solvent debtor. To the contrary, 20 Arriva's bankruptcy implicated hundreds of significant creditors and other interested parties, 21 and an array of assets from stock and intellectual property to valuable proteins, equipment 22 and cash. In addition, unlike Sylmar, Arriva was not a solvent debtor with extra cash on 23 hand to pay aggrieved appellants. Rather, was an insolvent debtor with limited funds to 24 satisfy its creditors—something AlphaMed well understands from its participation in the 25 bankruptcy case.

26 But AlphaMed's discussion of In re Sylmar Plaza, L.P., 314 F.3d at 1070 is even 27 more telling for what it omits. On page 14 of the Response, AlphaMed sets forth a block 28 quote, but scratches, via ellipsis, the most important part of that quote. In so doing,

1 AlphaMed severely misrepresents to this Court the holding of Sylmar. An accurate block 2 quote reads as follows:

3 Even if [Sylmar's] plan has been substantially consummated, 4 because Platinum's claim is only for monetary damages against 5 solvent debtors, this is not a case in which it would be impossible to 6 fashion effective relief.

7 Id (language omitted by AlphaMed in italics). Thus, Sylmar's own holding distinguishes it
8 from the present case. AlphaMed's misleading quotations notwithstanding, Arriva's 9 underlying bankruptcy case, unlike Sylmar, involves hundreds of parties, creditors and 10 third parties whose rights have vested after the Effective Date of the Plan.

11 AlphaMed relies heavily on In Re Weinstein, 227 B.R. 284 (9th Cir. BAP 1998), in 12 which the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel (the "BAP") refused to dismiss an appeal as moot.
13 This case is not compelling for at least three reasons. First, a BAP decision is not binding 14 on this Court. Second, as in Sylmar the appeal in Weinstein reflected only a two-party 15 dispute, and relief was merely an issue of "Debtors being required to pay [a bank] more 16 money." Id. at 290. As a result, the BAP could easily have ordered effective relief on 17 remand. Again, Arriva's bankruptcy is exactly the opposite. Here, a reversal of the Plan 18 involves numerous creditors and innocent third parties, and millions of dollars' worth of 19 stock and payments spread among them. Third and finally, Weinstein spoke of mootness 20 only in dicta, as the BAP ultimately affirmed the bankruptcy court's decision, finding 21 appellant bank's arguments to lack merit. Id. at 297-98.

22 In re Baker v. Drake, 35 F.3d 1348 (9th Cir. 1994) is also distinguishable, and in fact 23 supports Arriva's position. In that case, Baker, the debtor-appellee taxicab company moved 24 to dismiss an appeal as moot. The Ninth Circuit denied its motion, but only because Baker 25 failed to "submit[] any information about the extent of their expenditure" following plan 26 confirmation. Id. at 1352. As a result, the court held, it lacked a factual basis for a 27 determination of mootness. Either way, the Ninth Circuit noted, appellants sought modest 28 relief: merely to change the taxicab drivers' legal status from "independent contractors" to "employees," in order to bring the plan in line with Nevada law. At the same time, the 1 Ninth Circuit admonished that "[f]ailure to obtain a stay, standing alone, is often fatal," id.

2 at 1351, thus suggesting a firmer evidentiary showing by Baker could have succeeded in 3 dismissing the appeal as moot.

4 In this way, Baker only underlines the mootness of AlphaMed's appeal. Here, unlike 5 Baker, Arriva has made a strong evidentiary showing of its expenses and other steps taken 6 in the wake of Plan confirmation. Moreover, in contrast to Baker, reversal of the Plan 7 Confirmation Order here would implicate far more than a minor change in legal status.
8 Reversal here would require this Court to instruct the Bankruptcy Court to unravel a 9 complex plan of reorganization, altering the relationships among a myriad of parties and 10 unwinding millions of dollars of financial transactions and harming many innocent third 11 parties. Such an order would not result in relief at all, but would only create an 12 "unmanageable, uncontrollable situation for the Bankruptcy Court." In re Roberts Farms, 13 Inc., 652 F.2d at 797.

14 B. AlphaMed's Appeal Is Meritless

15 As previously noted, the instant Motion concerns solely the issue of mootness—not 16 the merits of AlphaMed's appeal of the Plan Confirmation Order. Nevertheless, AlphaMed 17 sets forth two grounds for its appeal. We will therefore briefly outline here why this Court, 18 if it were to reach the merits, likely would affirm the Plan Confirmation Order. Specifically, 19 if it reaches the merits, this Court would affirm the Plan Confirmation Order because (1) the 20 Bankruptcy Court did not err in its classification rulings, and (2) the Bankruptcy Court did 21 not commit clear error in making its factual findings on feasibility.

22 1. The Bankruptcy Court Did Not Err in its Classification Rulings

23 AlphaMed suggests the Bankruptcy Court erred by approving a separate class for 24 "General Unsecured Claims" (Class 4), and "Lezdey Claims" (Class 5). (Opposition, 17-25 18.) According to AlphaMed, the Plan should have grouped these claims together in a 26 single class because they are similar. Wrong. Because AlphaMed is a competitor to Arriva, 27 it could leverage its vote as a tool in negotiations against the debtor. Such competitors are 28

1 properly classified as separate from the general unsecured creditors. In re U.S. Truck Co., 2 800 F.2d 581 (6th Cir. 1986).

3 In any event, issues regarding classification of the Lezdey Claims are now moot, 4 because the Bankruptcy Court entered an order disallowing those claims and estimating 5 them at zero for voting purposes. If a party's claim is disallowed, then it may not vote to 6 accept or reject a plan.³ In re M. Long Arabians, 103 B.R. 211, 215 (9th Cir. BAP 1989);
 7 In re Miami Trucolor Offset Serv. Co., 187 B.R. 767, 768 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1995); cf.
 8 11 U.S.C. § 1126(a) ("holder of a claim allowed . . . may accept or reject a plan.") (emphasis 9 added). Oftentimes, a creditor whose claim has been disallowed will vote provisionally in 10 the hopes that her claim will be allowed on appeal. But here, AlphaMed did not bother to 11 cast a provisional ballot. (Exhibit A to the Ahrens Declaration.) Because AlphaMed could 12 not vote—and indeed because it did not vote—the issue of classification is moot. Indeed, 13 Bankruptcy Judge Jellen ruled that the classification issue was moot, noting that he 14 previously disallowed the claims and, in the alternative, estimated the claims at zero.
 15 (Exhibit B to the Ahrens Declaration, ¶ 3(a).)

16 Not only did it disallow AlphaMed's claims and estimate those claims at zero, the 17 Bankruptcy Court also sustained Arriva's objection to the vote of John Lezdey, an officer of 18 AlphaMed. Bankruptcy Judge Jellen found John Lezdey acted in bad faith by transferring 19 certain patents in violation of the Arizona Court's injunction. (Exhibit C to the Ahrens 20 Declaration, 70:7-14.) On this basis, the Bankruptcy Court disallowed the vote of an officer
 21 of AlphaMed, Mr. Lezdey. (Id.)

22 This Court would not likely vacate these factual findings. As a result, remand is 23 futile: the votes would be the same, the plan would be approved, and the Bankruptcy Court 24 in turn would confirm the plan for the very same reasons as it did previously.

25 ³ There is one exception to the § 1126(a) rule on creditor standing. Even if a party's claim 26 is disallowed, that party still may vote if the court temporarily allows the claim for voting 27 purposes. See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3018(a). In this case, however, the Bankruptcy Court 28 explicitly has estimated the claims of each of the Class 5 claimants at zero. In estimating such claims, a bankruptcy court "has broad discretion," In re Corey, 892 F.2d 829, 834 (9th Cir. 1989), the exercise of which is reviewed on appeal for abuse of discretion, id.

1 2. *The Bankruptcy Court Did Not Commit Clear Error in Making Its Factual
 2 Findings on Feasibility

3 AlphaMed suggests the Bankruptcy Court committed clear error in making its 4 findings on the feasibility of the Plan. (Opposition, 18.) In support of this argument, first, 5 AlphaMed suggests the Bankruptcy Court erred in finding the Eleventh Circuit appeal 6 would not affect ownership of the Protease License. (Opposition, 19:2-4.) Second, 7 AlphaMed suggests the Bankruptcy Court "reserved the right to revisit and modify its 8 various rulings." (Opposition, 14.) These assertions are misleading. In the bankruptcy
 9 case, Arriva marshaled substantial direct testimony by M. Sue Preston and John Barberich 10 in the form of declarations received into evidence. (Exhibit C to the Ahrens Declaration, 5-11 6.) AlphaMed cross-examined these witnesses (Exhibit C to the Ahrens Declaration, 37-12 67), and Bankruptcy Judge Jellen made his findings based on credible evidence. These 13 findings should not be disturbed on appeal. This court likely would reject AlphaMed's 14 arguments, and conclude the Bankruptcy Court did not commit clear error in finding 15 Arriva's Plan to be feasible.

16 a. Standard of Review

17 The question "whether a plan is feasible—is not likely to be followed by liquidation 18 or further reorganization—is one of fact . . . review[ed] under the clearly erroneous 19 standard." In re Pizza of Hawaii, Inc., 761 F.2d 1374, 1377 (9th Cir. 1985). Thus, this 20 Court can vacate the Bankruptcy Court's feasibility determination only if, upon reviewing 21 all the evidence, it "is left with a definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been 22 committed." Anderson v. City of Bessemer, 470 U.S. 564, 574 (1985) (quoting United 23 States v United States Gypsum Co., 333 U.S. 364 (1948).)

24 b. The Eleventh Circuit Appeal Will Not Affect Ownership of the 25 Protease License

26 AlphaMed states the Eleventh Circuit could affect ownership of the Protease License, 27 thus "undermin[ing]" Arriva's business. (Opposition, 19:2-4.) On this basis, AlphaMed 28 suggests the Plan is not feasible. This is incorrect. Bankruptcy Judge Jellen found that the 1 proceeding in the Florida District Court concerned only three issues: (1) misappropriation of 2 trade secrets; (2) tortious interference; and (3) common law unfair competition. AlphaMed

 3 Pharms. Corp. v. Arriva Pharms. Inc., 432 F. Supp. 2d 1319, 1329 (S.D. Fla. 2006).

4 Parsing the Florida Court's proceedings, Bankruptcy Judge Jellen found:

5 To the extent the objection is based on the allegation that reversal on 6 appeal will undermine the debtor's "entire business," the record in 7 the litigation between the parties concludes to the contrary. . . .
 [T]he [Florida Court] struck AlphaMed's claim for declaratory relief in that action regarding the debtor's license.

8 (Exhibit B to the Ahrens Declaration, ¶ 3(e)(1)(B).) Further, Bankruptcy Judge Jellen found 9 the finding of the Florida District Court jury was vacated by the District Judge Altonaga:

10 As far as the prospects of the Debtor losing its license, the Protease 11 [L]icense, I have taken into account the status of the litigation. I am 12 aware of the fact that the jury, in dealing with damages, made a finding, but that finding has been vacated. Right now, the operative finding is [the finding of] the Arizona Court that the license is valid.

13 (Exhibit C to the Ahrens Declaration, 72:3-8.) In fact, this Court, sitting as trial court in 14 Arriva Pharms., Inc. v. Sonoran Desert Chemicals, LLC, 99-02169-SI, made the same 15 finding. As noted in the Motion, District Judge Illston held: "[T]he [Protease License] issue 16 has already been extensively litigated in the Arizona court. . . . The license's validity was a 17 specific finding in the court's final judgment" (Exhibit H to the Barr Declaration in 18 Support of Motion to Dismiss as Moot, 7 et seq.; Motion, 4-5).

19 These findings demonstrate the appeal to the Eleventh Circuit does not involve 20 ownership of the Protease License. Thus, Bankruptcy Judge Jellen's finding that the 21 Eleventh Circuit's decision would not affect ownership of the Protease License, is not 22 clearly erroneous.

23 c. The Bankruptcy Court's Finding that the Reserve Protects AlphaMed
 24 Is Not Clearly Erroneous

25 AlphaMed states the Bankruptcy Court "reserved the right to revisit and modify its 26 various rulings." (Opposition, 14.) In so saying, however, the Bankruptcy Court simply 27 reserved the right to change its valuation of AlphaMed's claim. Because Arriva's plan is a 28

1 "pot plan," such a modification could only affect AlphaMed's recovery from the pot of 2 reserves established by the provisions of the Plan.

3 Arriva's Plan is a "pot plan," and provides a mechanism by which AlphaMed would 4 recover a larger share of the "pot" if it prevails on appeal in the Eleventh Circuit. If 5 AlphaMed prevails in the Eleventh Circuit, then Arriva will pay out to AlphaMed a 6 proportionally larger share of the funds reserved under the Plan, and other creditors will 7 receive proportionally less. If AlphaMed does not prevail in the Eleventh Circuit, it will not 8 receive such a share of the payout from the reserve funds.⁴

9 This contingent distribution mechanism is by no means unusual. Indeed, the Ninth 10 Circuit has endorsed such plan provisions as feasible as a matter of law. For example, in 11 Sherman v. Harbin (In re Harbin), 486 F.3d 510 (9th Cir. 2007), an appeal of a lawsuit 12 against the debtor remained pending in another court at the time of plan confirmation. The 13 Ninth Circuit held that the bankruptcy court merely need evaluate "the likelihood of . . .
14 success on appeal and the impact of such potential success on the feasibility of [the 15 debtor's] plan." Id. at 520. If a bankruptcy court makes this evaluation, and finds the plan 16 feasible, then no error has occurred.

17 In this case, the Bankruptcy Court made the following finding which is supported by 18 the record and would not be disturbed even if this Court were to hear an appeal:

19 [S]hould AlphaMed prevail on appeal, the plan requires . . . a reserve 20 [of funds]. . . . Such a reserve, then, will enable the debtor to 21 perform its obligation to Class 5 [Lezdey Claims] in the event of a successful appeal [by AlphaMed].

22 (Exhibit B to the Ahrens Declaration, ¶ 3(e)(1)(A).) In the course of this finding, 23 Bankruptcy Judge Jellen cited In re Harbin, 486 F.3d at 510, and found that a successful 24 appeal in the Eleventh Circuit would result in a higher recovery from the pot of reserve
25 funds to AlphaMed. (Exhibit C to the Ahrens Declaration, 71:17 et seq.) Bankruptcy Judge 26

27 ⁴ This mechanism is discussed at length in Arriva's Disclosure Statement. (See Exhibit B 28 to the Preston Declaration in Support of the Motion to Dismiss, 2 & 33 et seq.)

1 Jellen considered Harbin in his findings, and considered the potential of the Eleventh 2 Circuit appeal in finding the Plan was feasible.

3 At the Confirmation hearing, attorneys for AlphaMed tested the feasibility of Arriva's 4 Plan, cross-examining M. Sue Preston and John Barberich, the President of Arriva and 5 Financial Advisor to Nordic, respectively. Bankruptcy Judge Jellen tested the credibility of 6 both these live witnesses. It is therefore likely that if this Court were to consider the merits 7 of AlphaMed's appeal, it would not find Bankruptcy Judge Jellen committed clear error, and 8 would affirm the Plan Confirmation Order.

9 III. CONCLUSION

10 This Court must dismiss AlphaMed's appeal of the Plan Confirmation Order as moot.
